El Paso, Texas

The first show of the second week was in El Paso, Texas, at the El Paso County Coliseum. The show was a huge success, with the band playing to a sold-out crowd. The setlist included a mix of classic Dead songs and newer material from the band's latest album, "Built to Last."

After the show, the band took a day off to rest and prepare for the next leg of the tour. They spent the day hiking in the Franklin Mountains State Park and visiting the El Paso Zoo.

Tucson, Arizona

The next stop on the tour was Tucson, Arizona, where the band played at the Tucson Convention Center. The show was another sell-out, and the band again played to a packed house. The setlist was similar to the El Paso show, with a few minor changes.

After the show, the band had another day off. They spent the day exploring the city of Tucson and visiting the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum.

Los Angeles, California

The final show of the second week of the tour was in Los Angeles, California, at the Hollywood Bowl. The show was a huge success, with the band playing to a sold-out crowd. The setlist for the show was a mix of classic Dead songs and newer material from the band's latest album, "Built to Last."

After the show, the band took a few days off to rest and prepare for the next leg of the tour. They spent the time rehearsing and recording new material for their next album.

The Dead America Tour

The Dead America tour was a huge success, with the band playing to sold-out crowds across the United States. The tour was a celebration of the band's 50th anniversary, and it featured a mix of classic Dead songs and newer material from the band's latest album, "Built to Last."

The tour was also a chance for the band to connect with their fans. The band played a variety of venues, from small clubs to large arenas, and they always made sure to give their fans a memorable experience.

The Dead America tour was a reminder of why the Grateful Dead are one of the most beloved bands in American history. The band's music is timeless, and it continues to inspire and uplift fans of all ages.
